THE PLATE PRINTERS CASE. They Have Full Couldence of Event unity Winning.

Quite a sensation occurred in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing recently when a visitor began displaying to the printers counterfeit five dollar de ver certificates while being conducted through the Bureau. The visitor gave one of the counterfelt notes to the guide and one to a printer who was printing the genuinc notes of the same denomination. He said his son had received the notes recently and when the final was discovered it was too late to trace

He stated that the genuine issue is so poor that he believes the country is fleoded with counterfeits. No one fleoded with counterfeits. No one who saw the counterfeit notes could deny that they looked equally as well as the genuine notes after they are a little worn. This illustrates clearly the point made by the plate printers, that the best possible work is the cheapest. Mr. Graves submitted to the Finance Committee specimens of both hand and steam work. It is not likely the plate steam work. steam work. It is not likely, the plate printers assert, that he submitted any that would prove against the steam presses. The experts who gave evidence on these specimens did it under protest, and claimed that the test was unfair and a trick for Mr. Graves to take the best deam work from the take the best steam work from new plates and the worst hand work from old plates.

The printers also asked to have three of the superintendents under Mr. Graves called before the committee, but Mr. Graves promptly objected and claimed it was too late to offer more new testimony. Chief Bell of the Secret Service also wanted to testify more fully, but Mr. Graves objected for the same reason. The committee sustained the objection. They thereby deprived themselves and the Senate of some very valuable information. The Senate subcommittee reported against Some very valuable information. The Senate subcommittee reported against the bill, but it is believed by the print-ers that they will support it when it comes up for debate.

The men are full of confidence of eventually winning.

The American Pomological Society. A. A. Crozier, secretary of the American Pomological Society, left this afternoon for Ocola, Fla., to attend the annual meeting of the society, which opens on Wednesday next. Twenty-five States have reported delegates, and it is expected that nearly a thousand visitors will be in attendance. The visiting pomologists will be entertained by the Florida Horticultural Society, and the sessions are to be held in the buildings of the Sub-tropical Exposition. The leading features of the meeting will be a discussion of sub-tropical fruits and methods of marketing. Following the meeting will be a series of excursions to various parts of the State, for Ocola, Fla., to attend the annual meet
